expenditure that has been capitalised by him the allowance hereinafter referred to as a "depletion allowance".

(2) A depletion allowance shall, in the case of all such capital expenditure incurred by the concession holder prior to his effective date, be the amount calculated at such rate not exceeding twenty per cent of such capital expenditure as the concession holder may elect and, in the case of any such capital expenditure incurred by the concession holder after his effective date, be the amount calculated at such rate not exceeding ten per cent of such capital expenditure as the concession holder may elect:

(2) An annual allowance shall, in the case of any such capital expenditure incurred by the concession holder prior

(3) The rate at which an annual allowance shall be made shall be specified by the concession holder in the form of return required to be delivered by him under section 29.

14. Where a concession holder engaged in petroleum winning operations incurs capital expenditure on alterations to an existing building incidental to the installation of machinery or plant for the purposes of those operations, this Part shall have effect as if the said expenditure were expenditure on the provision of that machinery or plant and as if the works representing that expenditure formed part of that machinery or plant.

15. (1) Where in any accounting period any of the following events occurs in the case of any machinery or plant in respect of which an annual allowance has at any time been made to a concession holder engaged in petroleum winning operations, that is to say either—

THE LAWS OF BARBADOS

(2) Where there are no sale, insurance, salvage or compensation moneys or where the residual value of the machinery or plant exceeds those moneys, a balancing allowance shall, subject to section 17, be made and the amount thereof shall be the amount of the residual value of the machinery or plant or, as the case may be, of the excess thereof over the said moneys.

(3) If the sale, insurance, salvage or compensation moneys exceed the residual value of the machinery or plant, a balancing charge shall be made and the amount thereof shall be equal to such excess or where the amount of such residual value is nil, to the said moneys:

Provided that in no case shall the amount on which a balancing charge is made on a concession holder exceed the aggregate of the following amounts, that is to say—

- (b) the amount of any balancing allowance previously given to the concession holder in respect of the capital expenditure incurred by him on the provision of the machinery or plant in question.

(4) Any amount charged as a balancing charge shall for the purposes of this Act be treated as income incidental to the petroleum winning operations of the concession holder on whom it is charged for the accounting period in respect of which it is charged.

allowance.

16. (1) Subject to subsection (5), in computing the chargeable profits for any accounting period ending after the effective date of any concession holder engaged in petroleum winning operations, the Commissioner shall make to such concession holder the allowance, hereinafter referred to as an “incentive allowance”.

(2) An incentive allowance shall be an amount equal to ten per cent of the gross income of the concession holder:

Provided that if such amount exceeds fifty per cent of such gross income after the deductions and allowances permitted to be made in favour of the concession holder under the

(3) For the purposes of this section, the gross income of a concession holder shall be the remainder of the proceeds of all petroleum sold by and all income incidental to the petroleum winning operations engaged in by that concession holder during the accounting period in respect of which the incentive allowance is to be made, after deducting—

- (a) the cost of handling and transporting the petroleum sold from the well-head to the place of disposal within the Island; and
- (b) any royalties payable in respect of that accounting period by the concession holder to the Accountant-General under a lease or licence granted pursuant to the Petroleum Winning Operations Act.

Cap. 281.

(4) When and so often as any incentive allowance is made to a concession holder, the total amount of any qualifying capital expenditure capitalised by the concession holder pursuant to section 10 and in respect of which a depletion allowance might have been claimed by the concession holder for the accounting period for which the incentive allowance is made shall be reduced by the amount of the incentive allowance then made.

(5) No incentive allowance shall be made in computing the chargeable profits for an accounting period of a concession holder engaged in petroleum winning operations if the concession holder within the time specified in subsection (3) of section 12 serves on the Commissioner the notice referred to in that subsection.

17. (1) Where, in computing for any accounting period the chargeable profits of a concession holder engaged in petroleum winning operations, any sums allowed to be deducted under sections 8 or 11 or any allowances permitted to be made under sections 12, 13 or 15 exceed the gross income of the concession holder for that period or there is no gross income for that period, such excess or such sums, as the case may be,
